Welcome
The Queensland University of Technology and the University of Queensland are pleased to host the 27th Conference of the Australian Institutes of Transport Research (CAITR) in Brisbane between 7-9 December 2005. CAITR provides an opportunity for transport researchers and professionals to meet and discuss their work with peers and colleagues in a supportive and informal environment. The Conference is particularly relevant to recently qualified researchers and students (PhDs, Masters and Undergraduates), providing an opportunity to present work in progress and receive constructive feedback. CAITR also provides research organisations with an opportunity to present a summary of their research activities. The spirit of CAITR is traditionally informal and the conference provides researchers and practitioners opportunities to benefit from open discussion and peer comment.

Call for Abstracts
Papers are now invited on topics related, but not limited to, transport modelling and forecasting; accessibility and mobility; transport sustainability and environmental issues; intelligent transport systems; transport planning, policy and economic issues; traffic operations, management and control; road safety; infrastructure and maintenance; and data and information systems.
